Government. Merchant is shortly coming back to Europe to pay calls on the Belgian, Dutch, Greek, and Turkish Governments.

Mr. Kunz of the Pocket Testament League, which is endorsed by President Kennedy, came to see me, with two of his American colleagues. I was presented, as I [redacted] once was [redacted] in Bonn, with a copy of their New Testament. This, together with their other tracts, has now had a world-wide distribution of 25 million. They wished me to try to secure from the Prime Minister an endorsement of their operations. Since they represent an international organization which is holding a conference here, I told them it would be more appropriate to have their British colleagues solicit a letter from him.

E and I lunched today at the Mansion House, a morning coat affair. It was quite a gay gathering.

This afternoon, I called on the Turkish Ambassador, Mr. Kemal Nejat Kavur, at 69, Portland Place. After swilling a good deal of Turkish coffee, I cadged a package of cigarettes from him, made of Ismet tobacco, with the promise of more to come.

Robert Elson of TIME called on me, to discuss a cover story they are writing on Harold Wilson. He thinks the odds of four to one on Wilson's election are ill justified, although if the election were to take place shortly, the Labor majority would be overwhelming.

Yesterday I saw [redacted] Bill Lyons of Pan American, about extension of its service to the Bahamas and to Jamaica
